

Classics

The Department of Classics at the College of Charleston invites applications for a Visiting Assistant Professor, beginning August 2013. This position is a new appointment for one-year with the possibility of renewal for up to two additional years. The course-load is 3/3. Applicants should demonstrate the potential for archaeological research that will contribute to the institution's new major in archaeology and provide curricular and research opportunities for students working in classics and a variety of majors. Area/period of specialization is open, but there is particular interest in a candidate who complements the department's strengths and adds new dimensions. The ability to teach Latin and/or Greek language is also essential.

Ph.D. in Classics or Archaeology, teaching experience, and evidence of professional accomplishment are required. Letter of application, CV, unofficial graduate transcripts, teaching philosophy, sample course syllabi, a sample of scholarly writing, and 3 letters of reference should be submitted at <http://jobs.cofc.edu>. Application deadline is February 28, 2013, with preliminary interviews to be scheduled in March.

The Department of Classics currently consists of 6 roster faculty members and enjoys strong enrollments in Latin, Greek, and civilization courses. The College of Charleston is a public liberal arts and sciences institution with approximately 10,000 undergraduate students located in the historic district of Charleston, SC. Information about the Classics Department is available on the web at: <http://classics.cofc.edu>. The College of Charleston is an equal opportunity employer. Minorities, women, and persons with disabilities are encouraged to apply.
