

2021 Recipient of the Distinguished Adjunct Teaching Award

Emily C. Lee

The College of Charleston's Distinguished Adjunct Faculty Teaching Award was established in 2014 and honors adjunct faculty members who are outstanding among the College's many exceptional teachers. This year's award recipient is Emily Lee. A faculty member in the Department of English, Emily has been a dedicated adjunct faculty member and invaluable colleague since 2013.

Emily teaches extensively in the College's First-Year Writing Program, offering both online and face-to-face sections of English 110: Introduction to Academic Writing. She is recognized by students and colleagues alike as a master teacher whose passion and knowledge for her subject allow her to bring it to life. A consummate learner, she actively seeks opportunities for professional development and continually enriches her courses with cutting-edge pedagogy and technology. She works diligently to build an inclusive and supportive community in the classroom. Outside class, she has helped to support the larger First-Year Writing community by collaborating in the design and implementation of a new staff syllabus for English 110. English faculty new to online teaching look to Emily for guidance and support in this area and praise her for her expertise and unsparing generosity.
